

Searcy, W. A., and K. Yasukawa. In press. Eavesdropping and cue denial in avian acoustic signals. Animal Behaviour.

DuBois, A. L., S. Nowicki, and W. A. Searcy. 2016. A test for repertoire matching in eastern song sparrows. Journal of Avian Biology.

Akcay, C., R. C. Anderson, S. Nowicki, M. D. Beecher, and W. A. Searcy. 2015. Quiet threats: soft song as an aggressive signal in birds. Animal Behaviour 105:267-274.

Peters, S., W. A. Searcy, and S. Nowicki. 2014 Developmental stress, song learning and cognition. Integrative and Comparative Biology, 54:555-567.

Lachlan, R. F., R. C. Anderson, S. Peters, W. A. Searcy, and S. Nowicki. 2014. Typical versions of learned swamp sparrow song types are more effective signals than lesstypical versions. Proceedings of the Royal Society B 281:20140252.

Nowicki, S. and W. A. Searcy. 2014. The evolution of vocal learning. Current Opinion in Neurobiology 28:48-53.

Searcy, W. A., K. B. Sewall, J. Soha, S. Nowicki, and S. Peters. 2014. Song-type sharing in a population of song sparrows in the eastern United States. Journal of Field Ornithology 85:206-212.

Anderson R. C, A. L. Dubois, D. K. Piech, W. A. Searcy and S. Nowicki. 2013. Male response to an aggressive visual signal, the wing-wave display, in swamp sparrows. Behavioral Ecology and Sociobiology 67:593-600.